"I feel nothing, nothing. I feel nothing."

Deep in the city, four characters relive memories of life, love and loss. Their stories, confessions and conversations interweave to expose the horrors and desires at the centre of contemporary life.

Written in a violent and stunning poetry, Crave is a powerful exploration of the human condition, full of raw emotion and brutal yet beautiful imagery.

Performed under the city, in the atmospheric vaults of the Smirnoff Underbelly, Fail Better Productions bring Sarah Kane's penultimate and most highly praised play back to the Fringe, following its acclaimed 1998 debut:

"a hugely unnerving theatrical experience" Time Out
"the cutting edge of modern drama" Guardian
